ABSTRACT

This directory providing an overview of current educational communication networks and activities was designed to improve educational information access and dissemination. It is a descriptive guide to some of the major private-sector resources in educational dissemination within seven general categories: education associations, professional membership organizations, educational laboratories and centers, advocacy groups, education-related organizations, multimedia organizations, and foundations. Information provided for each entry includes the name and address of the association or organization; its objectives, activities, and programs; membership; major sources of funding; organizational structure; and dissemination activities through publications, together with their frequency and intended audience. Each entry has also been assigned a referral number, arranged sequentially across categories, which is used as the reference code in the List of Organizations, Index, and Quick Reference to Activities. The Quick Reference to Activities provides both a glossary of organizations and a checklist of the specific activities and services they provide. The Index identifies organizations by subject area or special focus and by education level or target audience. (Author/JPF)

INTRODUCTION

This resource directory was developed by the Consortium of Associations for Educational Dissemination, a project funded by the National Institute of Education. The Consortium provides an open and on-going forum for more than sixty professional education organizations to share ideas, policies, strategies, and programs. Our goal is to provide the best possible education to the nation by improving both the quality and quantity of communication among the members of the education community.

The directory is one of a number of Consortium projects designed to improve information access and dissemination. It is offered as a descriptive guide to some of the private-sector resources in educational dissemination and is intended as an overview of current communication networks and activities.

For quick and practical reference, directory abstracts are listed alphabetically within seven general categories:

- Education Associations
- Professional Membership Organizations
- Educational Laboratories and Centers
- Advocacy Groups
- Education-Related Organizations
- Multimedia Organizations
- Foundations

Each entry is assigned a referral number, arranged sequentially across categories, which is used as the reference code in the List of Organizations, Index, and Quick Reference to Activities.

The index identifies organizations by subject area or special focus and by education level or target audience.

The Quick Reference to Activities provides both a glossary of organizations and a checklist of specific activities and services provided by the organizations.

This publication is one of three companion volumes being cooperatively produced as a service to the education community. Others in the series are:

- Databases and Clearinghouses: Information Resources for Education, The Research and Developmental Exchange, National Center for Research in Vocational Education, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.
- Dissemination Networks: Information Resources for Education, ED Materials/Support Center, Far West Laboratory for Educational Research and Development, San Francisco, California.
